

ILLINOIS HISTORICAL JOURNAL

Volume LXXXII / Number 3 / Autumn 1989

Contents

- 147 "No, Thank You. I've Been to Dwight": Reflections on the Keeley Cure for Alcoholism

H. Wayne Morgan

- 167 Sounds of Silence: An Aspect of Lincoln's Whig Years

Aryeh Maidenbaum

- 177 The American Years of Harold Sinclair

Robert Bray

- 195 Some Thoughts on Public History and Social Responsibility

Tom D. Crouch

- 201 Book Reviews

- 216 Picture Credits

Cover: The office building of the Leslie E. Keeley Company of Dwight, Illinois. Dr. Leslie E. Keeley developed a formula that he touted as a cure for addiction to alcohol, opium, and tobacco. His formula was the basis for the founding of the Keeley Institute at Dwight—the first of many such treatment facilities. Amid controversy and accusations of fraud, the Keeley Company grew into a multi-million-dollar enterprise. H. Wayne Morgan relates the development of the Keeley cure, Keeley's rise to fame, and his public battles with detractors. The story of this unusual man and his efforts to help alcoholics begins on page 147.