

ILLINOIS HISTORICAL JOURNAL

Volume 90 / Number 3 / Autumn 1997

Contents

154 A New Look at the Beginnings of the Illinois Architects Licensing Law

Paul Kruty

173 The People Versus Nicholas P. Earp

William Urban

191 James R. Mann: The Illinois Years

Herbert F. Margulies

211 Book Reviews

224 Picture Credits

Cover: The Auditorium Building, located at Michigan Avenue and Congress Parkway in Chicago, was designed by the architectural firm of Adler & Sullivan. In 1866, Dankmar Adler and other Illinois architects proposed that the Illinois General Assembly pass an architects licensing law, but ten years passed before those architects achieved success. Paul Kruty's article on the passage of the Illinois Architects Licensing Law begins on page 154.

Copyright: Illinois State Historical Society, 1997