

Contributors

Roger Biles is Professor of History at East Carolina University. He is the author of Richard J. Daley: Politics, Race, and the Governing of Chicago (DeKalb: Northern Illinois University Press, 1995) and the co-editor of From Tenements to the Taylor Homes: In Search of an Urban Housing Policy in Twentieth-Century America (University Park: Penn State University Press, 2000). He is also a member of the Editorial Board of the Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society.

D. Bradford Hunt completed his Ph.D. in history from the University of California at Berkeley in December, 2000. His dissertation is entitled "What Went Wrong With Public Housing in Chicago? A History of the Chicago Housing Authority, 1933-1982." He is currently a Research Associate for the Encyclopedia of Chicago History and an Instructor in History at Roosevelt University.

Raymond A. Mohl is Professor of History and Chairman of the Department at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. A specialist in modern U.S. urban history, he is the author, editor, or co-editor of ten books, including The New City (1985), Urban Policy in Twentieth-Century America (1993), and The New African-American Urban History (1996). He was the founding editor of the Journal of Urban History in 1974 and served as president of the Urban History Association in 1997-1998. He has held Fulbright lectureships at Tel Aviv University, the University of Western Australia, and the University of Göttingen, as well as research fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Council of Learned Societies. He is currently working on two books: a study of the impact of interstate highways on the cities, and a history of race relations in Miami, Florida.

Wendy Plotkin received her Ph.D. from the University of Illinois at Chicago in 1999 with a dissertation entitled "Deeds of Mistrust: Race, Housing, and Restrictive Covenants in Chicago, 1900-1953." Her earlier work includes articles on rent control in Chicago in the World War II era and an analysis of non-profit housing development in Boston from the 1960s through the 1980s. She is the founder and editor of H-Urban, the H-Net scholarly Internet forum on urban history, and Project Coordinator for "In the Vicinity

