

Contributors

Elbert (Bert) Floyd received his bachelor's degree, with a major in history, from the University of Oregon in 1949 and his Juris Doctor degree from the University of Denver in 1963. He retired in 1978 from a quasi-judicial position in the Federal Civil Service. He is a lifelong student of Abraham Lincoln; He carried Carl Sandburg's Prairie Years in his U.S. Marine sea bag through the Solomon Islands in World War II. Floyd is married to Marie L. Campbell. They have three children, seven grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. He and Marie live in Battlement of Mesa, Colorado, which is about midway between Grand Junction and Glenwood Springs.

Darold Leigh Henson is a professor of English at Missouri State University. Like William Maxwell, he is a native of Lincoln, Illinois. In 1982 he earned a Ph.D. in English studies from Illinois State University. His first career was teaching English at Pekin Community High School (1964-1994). He has published on the theory, practice, and pedagogy of technical communication; rhetoric and composition; and the pedagogy of American literature. His book-length, online community history of Lincoln, Illinois, received the "Best Web Site of the Year" award from the Illinois State Historical Society in 2004 (<http://www.geocities.com/findinglincolnillinois>). He has recently added chapter-length Web pages to that site concerning Illinois Governor Adlai Stevenson's crackdown on gambling, including the State Police gambling raid at Lincoln, Illinois, on 11 October 1950, and the legal turmoil that followed.

Cord Scott, who is the author of the article on the history of Chicago's motorcycle manufacturers, is the chair of general education for Lincoln Technical Institute in Melrose Park, IL, as well as a Ph.D. candidate at Loyola University in Chicago. He has written for the Journal in the past. He owns a 1951 Harley Davidson, and dedicates his article to his dad, Jerry, who, according to the author, "got me hooked on motorcycles in the first place."

Covers

Cover: Picture Postcard of the Hotel Lincoln (demolished) on Pulaski Street, Lincoln, Illinois, near Logan Street (Business Route 66).

(Photo appears courtesy of Fred Blanford of Lincoln, IL.)